Ex Gov Morgan of N. Y. is elected U. S. Senator.

A train run off the track yesterday near Cadiz Junction, injuring many passengers.

There is said to be seven hundred millions dollars in gold now in the United States, hoarded and in use.

Senator Ready's soldier relief bill has passed the Senate, and is made the order of the day in the House.

The Government has 125 presses working off green backs, and it takes the work of all two thirds of each day to pay each day's debts.

The Union army is again before Vicksburg. The rebels attacked Fort Donelson, but were repulsed. They have however whipped our blockading fleet at Charleston.

S. Harcourt is now doing all kinds of custom work at his mill, in Canal Dover. There those who are desirous of having good flour and work promptly done, can be accommodated.

A Heroic Printer.

Corporal George Fox of the 51st Ohio was ordered in the battle at Murfreesboro to fall back with his regiment, but refused to do so, and continued leading and firing on the enemy, until severely wounded. We learn that he and his men have both since died of wounds. Fox was a printer of this town, much respected, and has left behind him a name for cool bravery, of which the ablest General might be proud.

Extract of a Letter from the 80th.

We are permitted to publish the following extracts of a private letter from Dr. Buell, Surgeon of the 80th, in relation to his capture, with the Adjutant, and two Lieutenants of the Regiment.

CAMP 20 MILES EAST OF MEMPHIS, January 21, 1863.

"The 80th was sent to Memphis to guard a train of about 800 wagons. I was riding in the rear of the Regiment, and stopped at a private house to get a drink of water; after passing the common salutations necessary upon calling at the dwelling of a stranger, getting a drink of water and answering about half a dozen inquiries, I proceeded to mount my horse and overtake the Regiment, which was only about 40 rods in advance. I rode along but a few rods when I met two citizens who stopped me by asking many questions which I answered, and attempted to ride away, when one of them hailed me again, and inquired if I had any late papers, I answered in the affirmative, and at the same time handed him a late paper. At this juncture I observed two men, in appearance citizens, riding toward me; as they approached, I mistook one for Adjutant Philpott, as I waited for the Adjutant to come up, at this moment they put spurs to their horses and rode up in great haste, one on either side, and thrust a couple of revolvers in my face and demanded me to surrender, which I did in double quick, as one of them was drunk. I inquired how he came by his horse and overcoat, he told me that he had but a few minutes before captured Adjutant Philpott and two Lieutenants of the 80th. They took me back about one-half mile, dismounted and ordered me to dismount, which of course I did, they then took my saddle and bridle (it being a good one) and put it on one of their horses and in exchange gave me an old one; during the exchange of saddles, I said nothing. Soon the one that was bloated with whisky wanted my cap, which I handed him; he commenced tearing off the wreath; this exasperated me and I told them if they were a set of robbers to take cap and all, but if they considered themselves soldiers, to let it alone, he then desisted, and gave back my cap, I proceeded to inquire who they were and whose command they belonged to, they said they belonged to Colonel Richardson's Partisan Rangers, the fact is, they are nothing more or less than Guerrillas, or common thieves, they claim that they are authorized by Jeff. Davis to raise a Regiment of Partisan Rangers and as an inducement they draw rations and pay from Government, and have all they capture which makes them a brotherhood of thieves. They took me back about two miles to the house of a Mr. Cartwright, where, to my surprise, I found Adjutant Philpott, Lieut. Hill, and Lieut. Patton; we all remained there till next morning, were treated well and fared well. In the morning I told them that they had no right according to the cartel to hold me as a prisoner of war, on this point they claimed to be ignorant, and in reply said, that they would have to take me to Col. Richardson, which we were five days in reaching; upon reaching the command, the Colonel claimed that our authorities held their Assistant Surgeon a prisoner, and he would not release me until the Surgeon was released. Colonel Richardson offered me a parole which I refused to accept, on the ground that Surgeons ought to be released and not paroled. So the next day we proceeded to Bolivar, under a flag of truce, to effect a release of the Surgeon; on reaching Bolivar, a distance of thirty miles, the commander of the post informed us that the Surgeon was not a Commissioned officer that they held him as a citizen, and further more they did not recognize them as belonging to the regular army, consequently an exchange could not be effected, so we went on our word of honor. We all returned to the rebel camp; they also held the Assistant Surgeon of the 7th Kansas, a prisoner. The other officers accepted their paroles, then they offered me a parole again, I told them I would accept one on certain conditions, that both parties must be covered by the conditions of the Dix Hill Cartel. After being held prisoners for two weeks and on Sunday morning we started to cross the Big Hatchie, which is navigable at this point; as we approached the ferry we observed some cavalry forces on the opposite side of the river, so we made our way back about four miles knowing there would be a skirmish, we had not got fairly out of range of the guns before the firing commenced and continued until sun-down, as neither force could cross, the casualties were slight, there was no casualty on our side, the rebels had one killed and six wounded; during Sunday night the rebel force skidded and left us alone. Early Monday morning we made for the river under cover of the white flag, knowing that our forces were on the opposite side; as we approached the river our forces observed us and not observing the flag, fired on us but without effect, we then waved the white flag and proceeded to the river and there found the Third Michigan Cavalry. The ferry boat being on our side, we soon got across the Hatchie, being now among our own troops we felt free again. The rebels had robbed us of our horses, saddles and bridles. We had to try our speed at walking, Jackson being the nearest point of access to the railroad, we made for that point, after walking about eight miles we suddenly came to the conclusion that we would not walk any further, it being thirty miles to Jackson. We called at a rich planter's house, observed a nice carriage, and horses, we went in and told said planter that the rebels had robbed us of our horses and he must hitch up in his carriage and take us to Jackson; as first he demurred, we told him it was no use that we would not walk being within our own lines, but to either alternative, he had to do it. Mr. Plaster said he was afraid the carriage would break down and that it cost him $850; we told him it made no difference, as he had his darkie hitch up and we were soon riding in true Southern Style; we reached Jackson next morning, and sent the darkie back.

During our eighteen days travel with the rebels we frequently put up at the best houses in Southern Towns. We travelled in all about three hundred miles, among the citizens we were treated with marked respect. We stayed one night at the residence of Andrew Jackson Donelson and was treated with as much courtesy as though we had been his guests. We also stopped over night at the widow Richmonds, a sister of James K. Polk, she is a very intelligent woman and conversed freely on the condition of the country, she enquired if I had any point in telling whether her Brother Wm. Polk, who was a Union man was dead, I told her I had seen his name announced in the paper as having died at Nashville on the 16th Dec, she replied feelingly and said she supposed it was true. We were treated well here, had a good supper and breakfast, good lodging and found our boots blacked in the morning which we considered doing well for prisoners up west.

At a meeting of the members of the Bar of Tuscarawas County, Ohio, held at New Philadelphia, on the 3d day of February, 1863. His honor, Judge McIlvaine was called to the chair, and H. T. Stookwell appointed Secretary.

The object of the meeting having been stated, Joseph C. Hance, D. W. Stambaugh, A. W. Patrick, Joseph Welty, J. H. Parrish, O. H. Mitchell, O. P. Taylor and A. L. Neely, Esqs., were appointed a Committee on resolutions.

J. C. Hance, Esq., Chairman, reported the following resolutions, and addressed the meeting at length, paying a feeling tribute of respect to the memory of the deceased, his many virtues and exalted character, which was listened to with deep interest by the members of the Bar present. The resolutions were then unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That whilst we lament the death of the deceased, we cherish his many virtues.

Resolved, That we sympathize with the family and relatives of the deceased and, though with them we are depressed with sadness, so to with them we will keep before our minds his image in the recollection of his many bearing and noble qualities.

D. W. Stambaugh, Esq., offered the following, which was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the Secretary is requested to forward a copy of the foregoing resolutions, to the family of the deceased, and also furnish a copy for publication.

H. T. STOOKWELL, Secy.
Geo. W. McILVAINE, Chairman.

Scientific American,
The Best Mechanical Paper in the World.

EIGHTEENTH YEAR.
VOLUME VIII.—NEW SERIES.

A new volume of this popular Journal commences on the first of January. It is published weekly, and every number contains sixteen pages of useful information, and from five to ten original engravings of new inventions and discoveries, all of which are prepared expressly for its columns.

To the Mechanic and Manufacturer.
No person engaged in any of the mechanical or manufacturing pursuits should think of "doing without" the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN. It costs but six cents per week; every number contains from six to ten engravings of new machines and inventions, which can not be found in any other publication.

To the Inventor.
The Scientific American is indispensable to every inventor, as it not only contains illustrated descriptions of nearly all the best inventions as they come out, but each number contains an Official List of the Claims of all the Patents issued from the United States Patent Office during the week previous; thus giving a correct history of the progress of inventions in this country. We are also receiving, every week, the best scientific journals of Great Britain, France, and Germany; thus placing in our possession all that is transpiring in mechanical science and art in these old countries. We shall continue to transfer to our columns copious extracts from these journals of whatever we may deem of interest to our readers.

A pamphlet of instruction as to the best mode of obtaining Letters Patent on new inventions, is furnished free on application.

Messrs. Munn & Co. have acted as Patent Solicitors for more than seventeen years, in connection with the publication of the Scientific American, and they refer to 29,000 patentees for whom they have done business.

No charge is made for examining sketches and models of new inventions and for advising inventors as to their patentability.

Chemists, Architects, Millwrights and Farmers.

The Scientific American will be found a most useful journal to them. All the new discoveries in the science of chemistry are given in its columns, and the interests of the architect and carpenter are not overlooked; all the new inventions and discoveries pertaining to these pursuits being published from week to week.

Useful and practical information pertaining to the interests of millwrights and mill owners will be found in the Scientific American; most of the improvements in agricultural implements being illustrated in its columns.

TERMS.—To mail subscribers: Three Dollars a year, or One Dollar for four months. The volumes commence on the 1st of January and July. Specimen copies will be sent gratis to any part of the country.

Western and Canadian money or Post-office stamps taken at par for subscriptions. Canadian subscribers will please to remit twenty-five cents extra on each year's subscription to prepay postage.
